

Weekly Peer Review & Reflection — Marking Rubric

Your peer review is worth 2 marks, made up of three parts. This rubric shows exactly what earns each mark, so you know what to aim for. Complete every part of the template, and fill in only the text inside the `[ ]` brackets — keep the headings and structure as they are.

Part 1 — The reviews you write for your peers (1.0 mark)

This marks the quality of the feedback you give to each peer in your group.

1.0 — Full marks

- You review every peer you were assigned (at least two), and each review is written specifically for that peer (not the same text reused).
- Your comments are specific — they refer to particular tasks and to what you actually saw in your peer's demonstration or code — and are clear and professional.
- You offer constructive suggestions where there's room to improve. If a peer's work genuinely had no issues, a positive review is fine — but still point to at least one specific thing they did well.
- If a peer did not complete the work, you say so respectfully and specifically.

0.5 — Partial

- You engaged, but the feedback is partly generic, mostly just repeats the guiding questions, or lacks depth and clarity; or you reused the same review for more than one peer; or you reviewed fewer peers than you were assigned.

0.0 — Not met

- Feedback is copied, generic, off-topic, left blank or as placeholder text, or shows no understanding of your peer's work.

Part 2 — Confirmation you attempted your tasks (0.5 mark)

This comes from the reviews your peers wrote about you, which you paste into Section 2. It confirms you attempted and demonstrated the required tasks in the workshop.

0.5 — Your reviewers confirm you attempted and demonstrated the required tasks.

0.0 — Your reviewers indicate you did not attempt/demonstrate the tasks, or you did not paste the reviews you received into Section 2.

> "Attempted" means you did as much as you could until you got stuck. Your solution does not have to be complete or fully working to earn this mark — but you must attempt the required tasks and demonstrate them to your group.

Part 3 — Your reflection (0.5 mark)

This marks your reflection on the feedback you received.

0.5 — Full marks

- You complete all of the reflection questions, engage with the specific feedback you received (say whether it was fair and useful, and why — not just repeat it), and include at least one concrete takeaway: something specific you learned, or a specific change you will make.

0.25 — Partial

- On-topic but shallow: you restate the feedback without engaging with it, give only generic takeaways (e.g. "I'll do better next time"), or answer in one line without reasons.

0.0 — Not met

- Missing, off-topic, blank, or left as placeholder text.

Quick tips to get full marks

- Review every peer you're assigned, and make each review distinct and specific (name the task, say what you saw).

- Give at least one genuinely useful suggestion — even for good work, note something specific.

- Paste the reviews you received into Section 2 — don't leave it empty.
- In your reflection, respond to what your reviewers actually said and name one thing you'll do differently.
- Fill in only inside the `[ ]` brackets, and don't leave any placeholder text behind.
